Full-Time Program Announced By ASO

A new revision in the Academy of Student Orientation has been announced recently by its executive board. Essentially, the revision involves the change from a part-time to a full-time activity.

Originally, the primary purpose of the ASO was the orientation of the newcomers to Evergreen. Under the revision, the Academy will now act as a confederative body whereby all the activity heads may assemble at least once a month in order to discuss problems pertinent to their respective organizations. In the past, there have been many problems relating to scheduling difficulties and lack of co-ordination between the activities. Through co-operation on the part of the various activities, these difficulties will be ironed out.

Social Committee

To better implement its functions, the ASO will operate by means of three major committees in addition to the monthly meetings. One of the most important committees is the Social Committee headed by Mike Abromaitis.

According to Mike, the purpose of his committee is to promote interest in joint social and cultural activities between Evergreen and the Catholic girls' colleges in the Baltimore area.

Presently the committee is working out a schedule of future events with N.D.M.

Green and Grey, Frosh Sponsor Christmas Dance

In conjunction with their usual drive to boost school spirit, the Green and Gray Club has come up with another "first" for Loyola. In conjunction with the Class of 1964, the club is planning a "Christmas Dance."

The dance will be held on Wednesday, December 28, from nine o'clock until 1. Sophomore Jim Berger, who is chairman of the dance, has announced that the Men of Note will furnish music. Junior Joe McCurdy will handle the decorations. The price of admission has been set at $3.00 per couple.

"First" For Freshmen

In addition to being a new feature here at Evergreen, the dance will give the Class of 1964 an opportunity to build up their treasury. The support of the dance by the student body will be one way to help boost school spirit. It is hoped that as many students as possible will interrupt their vacation for an evening of fun.

Mike Abromaitis and N.D.M.'s Jacquie Taylor compare notes on future events between the two colleges.

Father Knott Calls For Teacher Aid

By Frank Walsh

Recently, a missionary priest in one of our Southern states wrote a letter in which he stated that he was unable to get teaching sisters for his school--the only Catholic school in a heavily Protestant area. He said that unless he could obtain lay volunteers to staff the school, it would be forced to close.

Mission Service

The organization to which he was writing was the Volunteer Teachers Mission Service, a lay missionary organization which endeavors to place qualified Catholic teachers in mission areas both in this country and abroad.

Attention Graduates

The Volunteer Teachers Mission Service is looking for college graduates between the ages of twenty-one and thirty-five, who are good practicing Catholics and are able to live and get along with others for nine months in the United States, three years abroad, or a lifetime of total dedication to this work.

Anyone who is interested may obtain brochures and applications from Father Knott, the Student Counselor.

Christmas Concert Set This Weekend

This Sunday, December 11, at 4 p.m., the Loyola College Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Virginia Reinecke, will present its annual Christmas concert in the Loyola College Chapel. This year's program will be presented to the students, friends, and faculty of the college in conjunction with the Dunbarton College Glee Club from Washington.

Immediately following the concert, the President's reception will be held.

The program will consist of works by Palestrina, Praetorius and Vittoria and numerous old European carols, as well as three Christmas compositions from the Twentieth Century.

At 8 p.m. the following Wednesday, December 14, the club will travel to Washington to give a similar concert with Dunbarton College.

Nurses Mixer

In keeping with its fine traditions, the Glee Club is planning visits to several of the hospitals in the city to sing Christmas Carols. The hospitals on the schedule include Bon Secours Hospital on December 17, St. Agnes Hospital on December 21, and Mercy Hospital on December 22. After each of the performances, it is customary for the Glee Club to have a mixer with the student nurses at each of the hospitals.

On The Air

Also indicative of the quality and reputation of the Loyola College Glee Club is the fact that, for the third straight year, the club will record a tape to be broadcast over radio station WFBR during Christmas week, and possibly on Christmas Eve.

Quite A Quarterly

The Greyhound staff would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Joe France and the staff of the Evergreen Quarterly on the success of its first publication this semester. If the first issue is indicative of the staffs efforts, this year's publications will prove to be among the best literature produced by Loyola students.

PART II

Last week, we discussed in general terms the problem of school spirit here at Evergreen. Emphasis was placed on the fact that, while there is no single solution to the ugly problem, immediate action is necessary.

Perhaps we can find some consolation in the knowledge that this situation is not restricted to our own campus; but that it is a general condition existing in many colleges, and, in particular, in those in the Baltimore area. Nonetheless, we have no reason to be complacent.

There were many Loyolans who were angered by the editorial last week; there were many who realized its need and expressed the hope that positive action would be taken. Yet, in spite of a conflict of opinions, we feel that everyone at least recognized the problem, and this was our sole intention. Let us now look at some of the reasons for this lack of school spirit and some of the solutions.

One of the many complaints voiced on campus is that the Administration is too restrictive in its policies, overly protective, and even dictatorial. If this is true, can anything be done about it? Do we or do we not have any say? We can and we do. Here at Loyola College, we have a very vital and prominent organization, whose primary function is "to provide a means of expression for the sentiments of the student community on matters of common concern to the college." This coordinating body is the Student Council. How many of us have ever thought to air our complaints to this body by means of our respective class representatives?

Another question often heard on campus is "What happened to the school spirit of our high school days?" There was plenty then; and somehow in the transition from secondary school to college, it got lost in the shuffle. In high school we were forced to go to pep rallies, games, and the like. However, this pressure has now been removed. Once again, it is up to us. We could petition the Administration to have compulsory rallies, dramatic presentations, and games, similar to the compulsory Frist Friday Masses; but this would defeat the whole essence of school spirit.

It all boils down to this: there is a problem; we ourselves have created the problem; we alone can solve it by means of positive action. Are we going to remain complacent? Are we going to put the problem out of our minds for another year? Or are we going to take that vital step forward?

The Play's The Thing

We wish at this time to extend our warm congratulations to the members of the Dramatic Society for their fine presentation of "The Male Animal" last weekend. This was the first time in the history of the College that a presentation was produced and directed entirely by the students themselves. Special credit should be given to senior Dennis Smyth for a job well done.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Sir:

Your editorial in last week's issue on the problem of school spirit was of great interest to me. I too am concerned by the apathetic attitude of many of our students.

You suggested surgery. I agree. The problem should be laid out in the open, examined, diagnosed as to its cause, and operated on to tear out its very roots as a surgeon would tear out the roots of a disease.

In a way, this apathy on the part of Loyola men is a disease, a mental and spiritual disease with many effects that are more far-reaching than we think. If students do not express love of their school while attending it, how can they be expected to stand up for it and praise it on the outside? What opinion will the public, and in particular employers, have of the school and its products?

This is a problem of great concern, a concern not only to the Greyhound and the student leaders, but to each and every one of us on the Evergreen campus . . .

John J. Connor, Jr. '61

Dear Sir:

In last week's issue of the Greyhound, there appeared an editorial citing the lack of school spirit. Let me begin by stating that I do not believe that school spirit is dead at Loyola. It may be dormant but it is not dead.

In order to revive our school spirit, the reason for the present apathy must first be discovered. I propose that a major reason for the lack of school spirit is the students' fear of the administration.

Immediately after the paper was distributed last week, several of my fellow students and myself were discussing ways to initiate spirit by means of a pep rally. I proposed several ideas, which (and this is a personal guarantee) would result in at least a 90% student turnout. All of my ideas met with the same reaction from my peers—"The administration would never let you do it." How can school spirit be fostered if the students are afraid to display their spirit?

School spirit cannot be rammed down a student's throat, nor can it be demanded like an overdue bill. It must be a spontaneous giving of the student's loyalty to his school.

I sincerely believe that if we students were allowed to organize and execute programs for school spirit, free from administration regulation, there would be a marked increase in over-all school spirit and many more cries of Go! Go! Go!

Marty Skane, '61

Dear Sir:

In answer to your editorial of December 2, I would like to present my idea of school spirit.

School spirit is not cheering for athletic teams, but rather it is composed of a type of love and devotion of the principles for which the school stands.

Support of all the activities and events sponsored by the school are good and essential manifestations of spirit, but they are not the basic elements of school spirit.

The basic element is the attitude of the individual student. To have a better school spirit, the students must be convinced that they are the spirit of the school, and if spirit is sagging, they are at fault and not the Administration or Class Officers.

the Watchdog

The U.S. Government sends us word that gold rings wouldn't be the same without gold. They also send word that we will give 35 dollars in currency for 145 German marks, 171 French francs, 437 Mexican pesos, or 166 Indian rupees. While we are in complete agreement with the first statement, we cannot completely understand the second. Nevertheless, as good citizens, we sincerely urge the students to cash in any spare rupees which they have lying around the house. This may be a further plot by the government to enhance the enjoyment of all advanced R.O.T.C. officers by making their monthly checks a little more interesting.

It has been called to our attention that recently, one of John Baynes's juniors was forced to resort to asking Bill McElroy for the location of the Athletic Office. We cannot help being worried about this, as it is just the sort of thing which may lead us to compulsory gym.

Overheard at the last County Fair exam, a Freshman's conception of the chain of command. "Father Bourbon, God, President Eisenhower, John Connor, Captain Wightman, the Secretary of Defense, and Joe Enoch.

Recently, there has appeared another mysterious creature on our campus. Not since the demise of our dear friend, Harry, have we been given the opportunity of enjoying such romantic atmosphere as a hidden identity can stimulate. Who is this dashing figure, this masked marvel, this champion of semantics. Who is "The Bird"?

The column could have been a lot funnier this week if we only had some of the answers from the recent senior Psych test. Right, pal?

Thanks to Father Lawler, without whose class this couldn't have been written.

Play Review

By T. Wayne Hobbs

Loyola's last play, "The Male Animal," is not only the story of a college professor's domestic problems; it is also a satirical presentation of "Football vs. Education" in a big university town.

The results of this entirely student produced and directed play were evidenced by the reactions of Saturday's audience who, to say the least, were greatly amused not only by the humorous dialogue of Thurber and Nugent, but also, very much by the antics of the cast who were expertly directed by Dennis Smyth.

In addition to the expert direction and fine performances of the entire cast, a great deal of credit is due Marty Snyder and Ed Conery for their excellent professional settings.

Commendable performances were turned in by the entire cast and were highlighted by the delightful acting of Carol Goode and Ed Conery. Miss Goode portrayed Ellen Turner, and Mr. Conery played the role of Michael Barnes.

While reviewing the male cast, this writer was of the opinion that excellent performances were turned in by Thad Minninger and Ed Slawski, despite the fact that Ed was miscast. Also both Paul Montgomery and Nick Chesno turned in performances which left something to be desired.

Over all, Denny Smyth and the entire company of "The Male Animal" deserve the utmost in praise for their fine effort in this production.

Harbor Lights

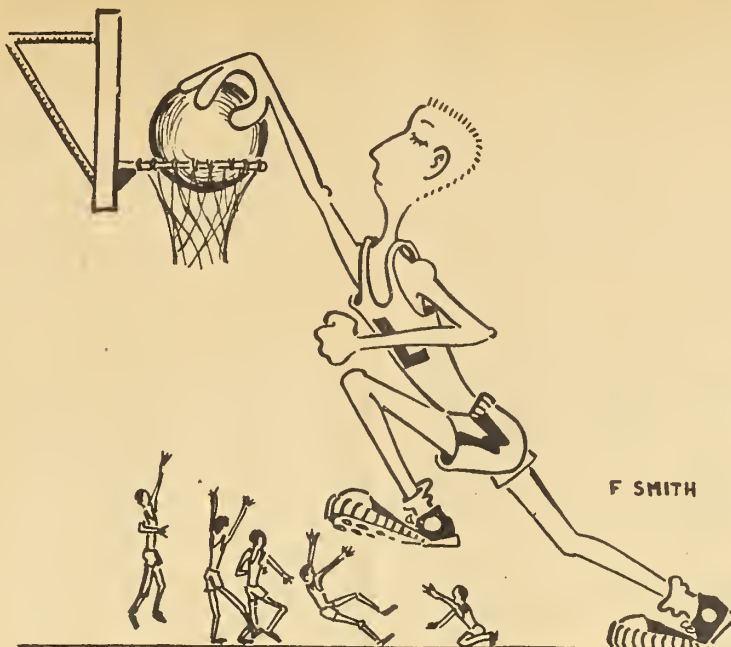

By Bill Kohlhepp

Harbor Lights is a new column and something different for the Greyhound. It will be an attempt to list and possibly comment on weekend entertainment around the port of Baltimore--entertainment, suitable for going to with a date.

There may be included such things as shows, movies, plays or anything which is in lights on a particular weekend. Some of these may be cheap, some expensive, some neither, but all should be date-worthy. And the dateless can go alone.

Nothing radically different will be appearing in the city this weekend. However, Hal Holbrook, using Mark Twain's own material and humor will again be in Baltimore impersonating America's great humorist, Samuel Clemens.

Acting and wearing himself as Twain did, Holbrook will begin his act at 8:30 at the Peabody Concert Hall on Friday and Saturday nights, the ninth and tenth of December.

These are the silver wings of a U. S. Air Force Navigator. As a flying officer on the Aerospace team, he has chosen a career of leadership, a career that has meaning, rewards and executive opportunity.

The Aviation Cadet Program is the gateway to this career. To qualify for this rigorous and professional training, a high school diploma is required; however, two or more years of college are highly desirable. Upon completion of the program the Air Force encourages the new officer to earn his degree so he can better handle the responsibilities of his position. This includes full pay and allowances while taking off-duty courses under the Bootstrap education program. The Air Force will pay a substantial part of all tuition costs. After having attained enough credits so that he can complete course work and residence requirements for a college degree in 6 months or less, he is eligible to apply for temporary duty at the school of his choice.

If you think you have what it takes to earn the silver wings of an Air Force Navigator, see your local Air Force Recruiter. Ask him about Aviation Cadet Navigator training and the benefits which are available to a flying officer in the Air Force. Or fill in and mail this coupon.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

By PETE COOK
A'sst. Sports Editor

Although Hound winter teams have a total of only one conference affair before the Christmas holidays, the contests they do have are of immeasurable importance. It enables the coaches to shuffle the players around to find the right combination for the league games. Loyola is fortunate in having a number of topflight opponents for their pre-season skirmishing.

Top-Notch Foes

The basketball team for instance faces teams like Seton Hall University, Georgetown University, Adelphi, Hofstra and St. Peter's College. The majority of these squads are out of The Green and Gray's class but the experience gained from playing them is great. The only interruption to this was Tuesday's game with Western Maryland.

Swimmers Too

The natators open tonight against Fordham University. This is always a topnotch meet because of the keen rivalry between the schools. It gives Coach Bill Klarner a chance to see what the freshmen can do under competition. The tankmen also go against Seton Hall the next day.

Coach Dick Clem's wrestlers are the only ones that don't benefit from this pre-conference activity. The grapplers open their season at home on January 7 meeting Johns Hopkins.

Too Much

It was evident that the varsity basketballers were over their head in the games against Seton Hall and Georgetown. Getting walloped by the combined total of about seventy points is no laughing matter but the Hounds came out of the games a better team. The same results can be expected of this weekend's trip to New York. Hofstra was rated the number one small-college team in the East last year and Adelphi is always tough.

Hounds Face Adelphi, Hofstra This Weekend

By Darrell Russell

This weekend the Hound basketball team travels to New York, where they will meet Adelphi and Hofstra, Friday and Saturday evenings, respectively. Last year Loyola beat Adelphi 72-65 and were edged out by Hofstra 72-70.

Loyola plays its next home basketball game this Wednesday at 8:15 P.M. against St. Peter's of New Jersey. St. Peter's smothered the Hound cagers 83-49 last year, however they are not as strong as last season.

Intramural Items

By Sam Levin

Intramural touch football action resumed over the past week with many interesting games having occurred. The Moleskins lost to the Dukes by the score of 25-0. The strong 13 point second half which followed the equally strong 12 point first half made victory fairly easy for the Dukes.

On November 18th, 1960, the Chem-Meds defeated the Powerhouses by the margin of 13 to 6. In this game the use of the long pass was prominent as it accounted for two of the three touchdowns and the extra point as well.

Hound Dogs Victorious

In the big game of the week the Hounddogs bested the Dukes by a score of 18-6 to gain the right to play the Moles in the final of the winners' bracket. Nick Jackson proved to be the Dukes downfall as he made two spectacular grabs of Mike Rose aerials for Hounddog T-D's.

Two Allowed Protests

In the other allowed protest the Mafia, trailing 12-6 is being allowed to replay their second half against the Chem-Meds.

In the only other action, the Dorseys tied the Untouchables in a scoreless duel.

Basketball

Blanks can now be picked up in the gym office for the intramural basketball season which will begin right after the Christmas vacation. All indications point toward a hotly contested league.

Last week in their first two games Loyola suffered 96-61, 112-73, shellackings at the hands of potent Seton Hall and Georgetown quints.

In the two losses our weaknesses were as obvious as the holes in the back of Don Wallenhorst's jersey. There is just no substitute for lack of height and experience, factors which were hoped to be overcome by aggressiveness and team play.

Certain hoopsters must also score more if we are to go anywhere in the conference. Ed Murn, who figured to contribute the other end of a 1-2 punch with John Heagney, sank a total of sixteen points in the two encounters. Hope exists that Ed will increase on his average.

Heagney, wielding the hottest hand on the squad, appears headed for his best season, as he hit for 25 & 28 points. Also encouraging has been the play of sophomore, Charlie O'Donnell. Charlie has been the biggest surprise among the newcomers to the varsity and may eventually earn a starting berth.

As a whole the team is progressing satisfactorily. In particular, Tony Torba has shown well and could be a big help. Tony registered eighteen points last week.

A late rally by Loyola fell short, as Western Maryland clung to a 71-68 victory at Evergreen, last Tuesday night.

The Terrors twice held seven point advantages, and the Greyhounds held a 39-33, six point lead after a rush at the beginning of the second half. The score was tied 31-31 at intermission.

Seniors, John Heagney and Ed Murn, contributed 30 and 16 points a piece for the losers.

WHO GOT THE TAP?—Yurek jumps while O'Donnell and Potter wait tensely.

Tankmen Travel To Fordham And Seton Hall Meets

Tonight the Loyola College tank team travels to Fordham for their opening meet of the season. Last year the Hounds sank the Rams by a score of 62-33. Coach Bill Klarner said last week, "The Fordham meet should be rated as a toss-up." The Hounds will be out for their first win of what they hope will be a most successful season.

Tomorrow night, Loyola meets Seton Hall in their second outing of the season. These teams did not meet last season, but the Hounds can expect a tough encounter.

The general outlook for the season looks very promising. After the Green and Gray meet Coach Klarner said, "The team will be as strong or stronger than last year's if some of the veterans get in better shape. Look for a winning record, but Loyola will be an underdog against American U., La Salle, and William and Mary of Williamsburg. The Hounds will probably be favored over St. Peter's and Holy Cross."

In last week's Green and Gray swimming meet, the Gray team, composed of the high scorers from last year, won a close hard-fought victory over the Green team. The distance freestylers, Marty Pilsch, Al Kubeluis, and Joe Metz looked very good. Sprinters, Pete Powley and Charlie Bree, also made an impressive showing. Ken Friemuth gave his usual great performance in the breaststroke and butterfly events, and Phil Young performed very well in the individual medley.

Some of the new freshmen candidates made impressive showings. Bill Butler, Tom Jeffers, and Dave McDonald did very well in their swimming debut for Loyola. The meet also revealed that some of last year's veterans need much more conditioning to get into top shape.

Mat Matter

After 2½ weeks of practice the matmen are coming along as well as can be expected. The kinks are straightening out and the lungs are holding out a bit longer with each workout. Five starters and three reserves are back with the squad this year and three freshman are destined for starting berths.

The Opener

The grappler's hope to improve on last year's record of 4-4 by first engaging Johns Hopkins on January 7. For their returning year in the conference, the matmen had good turnouts for last year's meets. Let's keep up the good attendance at these events.
